Shortly after a cremation service for a Darlington, England, man, attendees saw him strolling around town, Agence France Presse reported. The death of Frank Hughes, 80, a World War II veteran, was reported in a local newspaper, prompting friends to come to pay their respects at the service. Not long after, however, they spotted him out taking a walk. Turns out Hughes had the same name and age as the man being cremated, who had also lived in the Darlington; Hughes' friends had even unwittingly mingled

THE STORM'S STRENGTH: Just before Hurricane Katrina made landfall Monday, an area of dry air from the Midwest weakened it to a less destructive Category 3 storm; it had been racing toward Louisiana as a Category 5.

Crisis Deepens in Big Easy

As New Orleans flood waters rise, trapped citizens try to survive

NEW ORLEANS | Helicopters dropped sandbags on two broken levees as the water kept rising in the streets. The governor drew up plans to evacuate just about everyone left in town. Looters ransacked stores. Doctors in their scrubs had to use canoes to bring supplies to blackedout hospitals.

New Orleans sank deeper into crisis Tuesday, a full day after Hurricane Katrina hit.

The mayor estimated that 80 percent of New Orleans was flooded, while a countless number of residents were still stranded on rooftops.

Hospitals were running out of power and scrambling to find places to take their patients. At one clinic, broken glass littered some areas and patients and staff had fallen on floors slick with floodwaters.

"It's like being in a Third World country," said Mitch Handrich, a registered nurse manager at Charity Hospital, where nurses were ventilating patients by hand after the power and then the backup generator failed.

Some 300 patients had yet to be evacuated.

The historic French Quarter appeared to have been spared the worst flooding, but its stores

"The looting is out of control. The French Quarter has been attacked," Councilwoman Jackie Clarkson said. "We're using exhausted, scarce police to control looting when they should be used for search and rescue while we still have people on rooftops."

Rescue teams were still picking up people throughout the city Tuesday, leaving them on island-like highway overpasses and on a levee to wait to be moved again.

Eventually, they will end up in the Superdome, where 15,000 to 20,000 people have already taken refuge, said Louisiana National Guard Maj. Gen. Bennett C. Landreneau. One man died in the Superdome after falling from a raised walkway. ADAM NOSSITER (AP)

BAD LUCK: Hurricane Katrina dealt the Gulf Coast's casinos a devasting hand, destroying several properties and crippling the industry, important to the region for months, if not years to come until companies can rebuild their operations.

30 Die as Biloxi Building Is Engulfed

Survivor tells how storm destroyed apartments

BILOXI, MISS. | Joy Schovest swam for her life, fighting Hurricane Katrina's storm surge and its angry winds, brushing aside debris and floating cars to reach higher ground.

Behind her, at least 30 of her neighbors in the Quiet Water Beach apartments were dying, trapped in their crumbling two-story building as it was swept away with much of the coastal community.

"We grabbed a lady and pulled her out the window and then we swam with the current," said Schovest, 55, breaking into tears. "It was terrifying. You should have seen the cars floating around us. We had to push them away when we were trying to swim."

The tragedy at the apartment building represented the biggest known cluster of deaths caused by Katrina. An emergency management official confirmed there were at least 100 dead in the Biloxi-Gulfport area.

"This is all that's left of my house," said nearby resident Jack Crochet, 56, shaking his head and looking at the rubble. "It's never going to be the same. It's over."

The storm also inflicted a punishing blow to Biloxi's waterfront casinos, down the beach from the apartment building. The Grand Casino gambling barge and a second casino broke away from their moorings, ending up in a ditch now filled with water and slot machines. HOLBROOK MOHR (AP)

Gulf Coast Residents In Shock

Katrina's victims find options limited, future uncertain

NEW ORLEANS | Relief gave way to despair Tuesday for many survivors of Hurricane Katrina. Facing days of misery and uncertainty, awaiting clearance to return to damaged or destroyed homes, some broke down in tears.

Many thousands of people will need temporary shelter for weeks, possibly months, said Mike Brown, director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency. Many areas also face prolonged power out-

Along the Mississippi Gulf Coast, evacuated residents struggled to come to terms with the extent of the destruction, and the massive cleanup and rebuilding efforts that lie ahead.

Bill Higginbotham, a 91-year-old retired carpenter from Biloxi, and his son-in-law had driven up from the coast seeking to buy gasoline.

"Most probably I don't have a home anymore," he said of the single-story, timber-frame home he built in 1940. "I wanted to live, but after this I don't want to live no more. KEVIN MCGILL (AP)

Bush Decides to Cut Vacation Short

WASHINGTON | As medical disaster assistance teams were deployed to the area devastated by Hurricane Katrina, President Bush cut short his vacation Tuesday to return to Washington to focus on the storm's damage and federal response.

White House spokesman Scott McClellan said the president will chair a meeting Wednesday of a White House task force set up to coordinate the federal response and relief effort.

President Bush, seen here in Waco, Texas, on Tuesday will return to D.C.

FederalEmergencyManagement Agency Director Michael Brown has called the damage catastrophic. "This hurricane has caused devastation over a wide area," he said.

Mississippi Sen. Trent Lott urged the president to visit the damaged region. "Mr. President, the people of Mississippi are flat on their backs. They're going to need your help," Lott said in a call to Bush. "I urge you to come to Mississippi. Your visit would be very good for the morale of Mississippians who are hurting right now." (AP)

Support for Bush Dips In New Poll

Energy prices, turmoil in Iraq take their toll on job approval rating

WASHINGTON | Spiraling gas prices and continuing bloodshed in Iraq continue to take their toll on President Bush, whose standing with the public has sunk to an all-time low, according to the latest Washington Post-ABC News poll.

The survey found Bush's overall job approval at 45 percent, down seven points since January and the lowest ever recorded in Post-ABC surveys. Fifty-three percent disapprove of the job Bush is doing.

What may have pushed Bush's overall ratings down in the latest poll is pervasive dissatisfaction over soaring gas prices. Two-thirds of those surveyed said gas prices are causing financial hardship to them or their families.

More ominously for the president, six in 10 Americans said there were steps the administration could take to reduce gas prices. RICHARD MORIN AND DAN BALZ (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Support for Poverty Rate Rises Again

Census shows number of poor in U.S. climbs to 37 million in 2004

WASHINGTON | Even with a robust economy that was adding jobs last year, the number of Americans who fell into poverty rose to 37 million — up 1.1 million from 2003 — according to Census Bureau figures released Tuesday.

It marks the fourth straight increase in the government's annual poverty measure.

The Census Bureau also said household income remained flat, and that the number of people without health insurance edged up by about 800,000 to 45.8 million people.

"I was surprised," said Sheldon Danziger, co-director of the National Poverty Center at the University of Michigan. "I thought things would have turned around by now."

While disappointed, the Bush administration — which has not seen a decline in poverty numbers since the president took office — said it was not surprised by the new statistics.

Commerce Department spokeswoman E.R. Anderson said they mirror a trend in the '80s and '90s in which unemployment peaks were followed by peaks in poverty and then by a decline in the poverty numbers the next year.

Overall, the nation's poverty rate rose to 12.7 percent of the population last year. Of the 37 million living below the poverty level, close to a third were children. (AP)

5 Men Held in Hariri Probe

Suspects questioned in killing of Lebanon's ex-PM

BEIRUT, LEBANON | The United Nations named four pro-Syrian generals and a former legislator as suspects Tuesday in the February assassination of former Prime Minister Rafik Hariri — the first major break in a crime that transformed Lebanon.

U.N. investigators were interrogating the men at a hotel overlooking Beirut after searching the generals' homes. The Lebanese government, acting at the request of the U.N., detained three of the suspects;

a fourth surrendered for questioning and a fifth returned from Syria, promising to cooperate.

Iraq Draft May See Revisions

U.S. ambassador says 'final, final' version could contain changes

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | In a dramatic shift, the U.S. ambassador raised the possibility Tuesday of further changes to Iraq's draft constitution, signaling that the Bush administration has not given up its campaign to push through a charter that will be broadly accepted.

Also Tuesday, U.S. warplanes struck three suspected al Qaeda targets near the Syrian border, killing what the U.S. military called a "known terrorist." Iraqi officials said 45 people died, most in fighting between Iraqi tribes.

The nation's Sunni Arabs had demanded revisions in the draft, finalized last weekend by the Shiite-Kurdish majority. A Shiite leader said only minor editing would be accepted since the draft was now ready for an Oct. 15 referendum.

But Ambassador Zalmay Khalilzad told reporters he believed "a final, final draft has not yet been, or the edits have not been, presented yet" - a strong hint that Washington wants another bid to accommodate the Sunnis. (AP)

Zimbabwe's Constitution Overhauled

Landowners stripped of rights; critics face new travel restriction

HARARE, ZIMBABWE | Dancing and cheering, lawmakers approved sweeping constitutional changes Tuesday that prominent lawyers have called the greatest challenge yet to Zimbabwean civil liberties.

Ruling party representatives erupted into celebration after Parliament voted 103-29 to endorse the constitutional overhaul that sharply restricts private property rights and allows the government to deny passports to its critics. The Constitutional Amendment Bill now goes to President Robert Mugabe to sign into law.

The slate of amendments, the 17th since independence from Britain in 1980, strips landowners of their right to appeal expropriation and declares that all real estate is now on a 99year lease from the government.

Justice Minister Patrick Chinamasa said this would stop 5,000 evicted white farmers from frustrating land redistribution to black Zimbabweans.

The overhaul also calls for a new 66-seat Senate to be formed, which critics charge the ruling party will use to increase its patronage powers. michael hartnack (AP)

Md. Group Fights Gay Marriage Ban

Plaintiffs argue 1973 law on legal unions violates equal rights

BALTIMORE | The lawyer for 19 gay men and women argued in circuit court Tuesday that Maryland's ban on same-sex marriages violates the guarantee of equal rights under the state constitution.

"There is no constitutionally permissible reason for this discrimination," Kenneth Choe, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer, told Judge Brooke M. Murdock. "It does not serve a rational or legitimate purpose of government."

The 1973 law specifying that marriage is a union of one man and one woman was defended by the state attorney general's office.

Assistant Attorney General Steven Sullivan appealed to Murdock not to interject the courts into what he said is a legislative prerogative. Approving marriage of same-sex couples would change "the essence of the institution as it has always existed." he said.

After hearing more than an hour of arguments from opposing lawyers, Murdock said she would issue her decision in a written opinion, but did not say when the opinion would be ready.

Maryland and at least five other states — New York, New Jersey, California, Connecticut and Washington — have lawsuits pending challenging state prohibitions on same-sex marriages. A similar ban was struck down in Massachusetts, the only state where gay marriages are legal. TOM STUCKEY (AP)

Oil Prices Hit $70 a Barrel

Traders scramble after storm hits Gulf: tab at gas pump could rise

The potential storm damage to oil platforms, refineries and pipelines that remain closed along the Gulf Coast drove energy prices to new highs Tuesday, with crude futures briefly topping $70 a barrel and wholesale gasoline costs surging to levels that could lead to $3 a gallon at the pump in some markets.

Companies scrambled planes and helicopters to get an aerial view of their assets and they began escorting some previously evacuated workers back to offshore facilities to conduct detailed inspections of rigs and underwater pipes. Some producers found that a rig or platform had disappeared, drifted or listed, while others reported that damage appeared minimal.

The trading frenzy on futures markets reflected the uncertainty and fear about the full extent of the damage Hurricane Katrina inflicted, as well as the constraints being felt where actual shipments of fuel are bought and sold.

"This is an extremely serious situation," said Tom Kloza, director of the Wall, N.J.-based Oil Price Information Service.

Light sweet crude for October delivery rose $2.61 to settle at $69.81 a barrel, a record close since trading began in 1983 on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Prices had reached as high as $70.85, an intraday high on Nymex, although still below the inflation-adjusted high of about $90 a barrel that was set in 1980. Brad foss (AP)

iTunes Cell Phone Expected to Debut

SAN FRANCISCO | A long-delayed cell phone from Apple Computer Inc. and Motorola Inc. that can play iTunes music downloads is finally set to debut through Cingular Wireless, a research analyst said.

The new phone will be equipped with software that would allow it to play songs purchased at Apple's iTunes Web site, according to Roger Entner, an analyst for research firm Ovum who said he learned of the plans from an industry executive.

Representatives from Apple, Cingular and Motorola declined to comment, but the three companies are expected to roll out the device at an event here next week. Apple announced Monday that it would host a news conference Sept. 7.

It was unclear whether the new phone will allow users to download music directly over a cellular Internet connection or if they would have to download songs to a computer and then transfer them to the handset.

Just about every major cell phone maker has been working to launch a music phone that could compete with the iPod, Apple's popular digital music player.

Motorola originally planned to unveil the phone in February but the debut was scrubbed at the last minute with no explanation. (AP)

Gas Prices? Ha! Will You Be My

For those who laugh in the face of pricev petrol: Hummer H3

ROAD TEST | It costs a lot less to buy a Hummer these days. New for the 2006 model year is a smaller-sized. five-passenger Hummer H3 whose starting manufacturer's suggested retail price, including destination charge, is $29,500.

This is $24,355 less than the base price for the previously lowest-priced Hummer — the full-size Hummer H2 SUV for 2006 - and some $111,000 less than the original Hummer H1

Though it's roughly based on the Chevrolet Colorado and its sibling GMC Canyon pickup trucks, the H3 looks like a genuine, militarystyled Hummer. It has boxy-form wheel fenders, a Hummer verticalbar grille and the smaller-thanexpected windows. It's just built on a slightly smaller scale.

All H3s come standard with permanently engaged four-wheel drive. There are no trim levels for the H3. Customers start with the base model and add options — everything from a cargo cover for the back storage area priced at $50 to an off-road suspension package at $925.

This off-road package isn't just for show. The H3 capably goes offroad, where its front coil springs, solid rear axle, four, standard underbody skid plates, 9.1-inch ground clearance and clipped front and rear overhangs help manage tricky terrain well. A 37-foot turning circle comes in handy in off-road terrain as well as during U-turns on pavement.

The Hummer H3 is powerful. And takes a powerful amount of gasoline to run.

With rear leaf springs, the ride was truckish now and then. For example, there was some bounciness in rugged going and when the H3 traveled over potholes. But overall, it was a much more pleasant ride than expected.

Note there's no V8 here, as there are in other Hummers. Instead, the H3's 3.5-liter, Vortec 3500 is an inline five-cylinder gasoline engine that's in the Colorado and Canyon and produces the same 220 horsepower.

Don't expect to save at the gas pump with this smaller Hummer. While the H3 with automatic transmission is rated at 16 miles a gallon in city driving and 19 mpg on the highway, this rating only puts it in the bottom half of current SUVs in fuel economy. ANN M. JOB (AP)

I own a 1999 Lexus ES-300 with more than 120,000 miles on it. A maintenance service recommended that I flush and replace the automatic transmission fluid, yet the dealer never mentions it when I take the car in.

You are nearly 100,000 miles overdue for a very important maintenance service. Someone highly qualified must evaluate the condition of your transmission and transmission fluid before touching it. The transmission may already be severely damaged.

You've said that high-mileage oils should not be used on vehicles with low mileage. Why?

When you use costly high-mileage oil, you're committed. Often if you try to go back, oil consumption skyrockets.

Terps Go Back to the Drawing Board

Friedgen out to make amends for last year's disappointing season

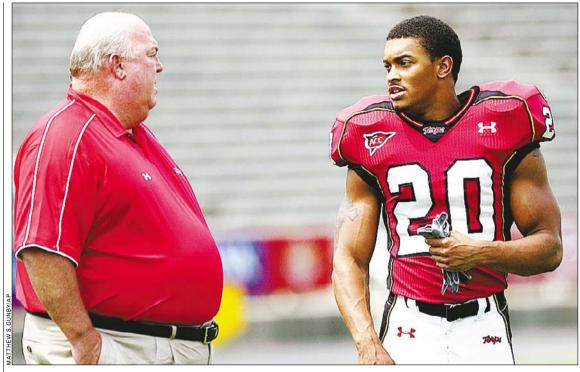

TERPS | Soon after Maryland completed its very disappointing 2004 season, Ralph Friedgen switched on the VCR and turned back the clock.

The Terrapins went 5-6 last year, ending a run of three consecutive stellar seasons in which they won at least 10 games and played in a bowl game. Quarterback issues and a sputtering offense were certainly a factor in the regression, but Friedgen took full responsibility for the slide.

"I go back and start over every year. I look at how well we've done, look at our film; analyze it," he said. "Last year, I didn't do that. I felt like we had everybody back on our staff. I won't make that mistake again."

Before Friedgen arrived in 2001, there were no lofty expectations at Maryland. Playing in a bowl game had become a distant memory for a program that had just one winning season and three different head coaches in 10 years since 1990.

But Friedgen immediately turned the program around, capturing the Atlantic Coast Conference title in his rookie season and amassing 31 victories and three bowl appearances in three years.

Then came last season. Maryland scored more than 13 points in only one of its final seven games — and lost five of them.

So now it's back to the basics for Friedgen and his gang. No one expects much of Maryland this season, which is the way it was when the coach took over four years ago.

"I hope there are a lot of similarities. This group of players is very similar in terms of preparation," Friedgen said. "I think the kids are really hungry. They want to make amends for last year."

Wali Lundy regains his starting spot at running back to begin the season.

Lundy Has A Cavalier Attitude

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | If he never carried the ball again in a game, Wali Lundy would finish his career as one of the best running backs in Virginia history.

He's already third on the Cavaliers career scoring list, seventh on the career rushing list, 14th on the career receptions list and has a full season remaining.

But as Lundy prepares to dramatically improve those rankings, he's approaching it with a chip on his broad shoulders. "I've got a lot more to prove," he said.

Last season, Lundy was on track to have his best year. After five games, all victories, he had rushed for 494 yards and 10 touchdowns as the starting tailback.

Then, after Virginia managed just 20 rushing yards in a 36-3 loss to Florida State, coach Al Groh gave Alvin Pearman the start at Duke the next week.

Pearman rushed for 223 yards, one shy of the Virginia single-game record, and made it difficult for Groh to give Lundy his old spot back.

Lundy clearly didn't like losing his starting spot last season, but he didn't complain, kept working hard and ran for seven more touchdowns as a reserve.

"God does everything for a reason," he said. "I'm going to be the same player whether I'm first string or second string." HANK KURZ JR. (AP)

Navy Begins to Rebuild Following Jewel of a Season

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | If Navy head coach Paul Johnson hears another question about rebuilding, he might just "pitch a fit" — to use one of his favorite southern expressions.

Navy graduated 36 seniors, including 17 starters, from last year's team that went 10-2 with a victory in the Emerald Bowl. It was the winningest season at the academy in 99 years and earned Johnson the Bobby Dodd Award as National Coach of the Year.

"I honestly don't know what rebuilding means," Johnson said. "I just look at it as another season. It wouldn't be fair to tell 19 seniors it's a rebuilding year." (AP)

Spurrier Moves Back Into Spotlight

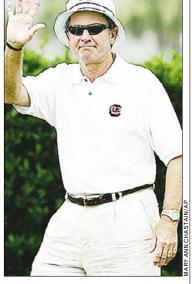

The ol' ball coach to make South Carolina debut on national TV

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | Cue the TV cameras and dig out the new visors.

Steve Spurrier is back — and not the version who failed in two years coaching the Redskins.

Spurrier begins his South Carolina coaching career Thursday night against Central Florida. And befitting the return of one of college football's most charismatic personalities, a joyous party is planned for sold-out Williams-Brice Stadium.

ESPN is basing its College GameDay show in town, along with profiling the Palmetto State in the network's continuing feature highlighting all 50 states. The country band Big & Rich will perform before the game.

The main attraction, though, comes before kickoff when the 60-year-old Spurrier steps onto the field after three years away from the college game where his Florida teams once consistently contended for the national title.

"We realize we have not done anything to earn the spotlight, but we'll take it," Spurrier said. "Hopefully, our play will prove that maybe we deserve it." PETE IACOBELLI (AP)

James Blake, a finalist at the Legg Mason Classic in D.C., is a fan favorite at the U.S. Open. Tuesday, he gave his supporters a straight-set win over Greg Rusedki.

Blake Enjoys an Uplifting Victory

TENNIS | If ever a player deserved a turn of good fortune, and earned one by dint of hard work, it's James Blake.

To see him play so beautifully and with unfettered ease in a straight-sets takedown of former finalist Greg Rusedski at the U.S. Open on Tuesday was to watch a man who summoned a reservoir of inner strength from a year of unrelenting misery.

Backed by his friends and many fans chanting "James! James! James!" in Arthur Ashe Stadium, Blake served a 131 mph ace to reach match point, then ripped a backhand passing shot to beat the No. 28 Rusedski, 7-5, 7-6 (3), 6-3.

It was a sweltering afternoon at the Open as No. 12 Tim Henman of Britain lost 6-4, 6-2, 6-2 in the first round to Spain's Fernando Verdasco and No. 1 Roger Federer won his first-round match against Czech newcomer Ivo Minar 6-1, 6-1, 6-1 in 1 hour, 1 minute.

But there was no more joyous scene than in the stadium as the unseeded Blake played his heart out a year after he could do no more than watch the tournament from home due to various ailments.

"It was tough to watch," Blake said. "I kept thinking, 'I wonder how I'd be doing if I was there.' Now this year to go out there, it's just a great feeling." STEVE WILSTEIN (AP)

Tupa Goes on Injured List

Move clears the way for Mohr, Groom to fight for open punter's spot

REDSKINS | Tom Tupa was placed on injured reserve Tuesday with a back injury, leaving Chris Mohr and Andy Groom to compete for the Washington Redskins punting job.

Tupa strained his back while warming up before the exhibition game against Cincinnati two weeks ago and hasn't punted since.

He flew to California this week to get a second opinion, but the prognosis wasn't good enough for the Redskins to count on him for the regular season.

"I've taken shots for it. It hasn't worked," Tupa said. "That's disappointing."

Tupa, 39, led the NFC with a 44.1-yard average last season and was the second alternate for the Pro Bowl. He was the prohibitive favorite to keep the Redskins job this year before his injury.

"It was a tough deal for us for him to get hurt," Redskins coach Joe Gibbs said. "So what we're going to try to do is make the best decision."

The decision comes down to Mohr vs. Groom. Mohr, also 39, was signed Monday as concern over Tupa's back mounted. Groom has been around since the opening day of training camp, but he's never punted in a regular season game.

Death Cab for Cutie keeps its indie soul on a big-time budget

MOVING UP | Ben Gibbard describes Death Cab for Cutie's major-label debut, "Plans," as his band's most optimistic record to date.

Yet old fans need not worry. This is an example of how Death Cab for Cutie does optimism: "Love is watching someone die."

"Plans," released Tuesday via a deal with Atlantic Records, has not done away with the act's melancholy melodies and heartachedriven songs. While the lyric from "What Sarah Said" may be Gibbard's strongest affirmation of love to date, even happiness becomes sadly elegant in the band's hands.

"I feel like this is more of an open, optimistic record, but there is a theme of mortality that floats through it," Gibbard said. "... I like the idea of having a love song about people dying rather than love songs about walking hand in hand down the sand."

For every moment where Gibbard's glistening guitar is poised to send a song soaring, Chris Walla drops in a mournful keyboard fragment to bring the tune back to earth.

RIDING THE MAJOR-LABEL WAVE: Seattle quartet Death Cab has been considered the ultimate indie band for five albums.

Rhythms wash over Gibbard's soft vocals, and even on such a bouncy song as "Crooked Teeth," Gibbard sounds as if he is sharing an intimate late-night conversation.

Blessed with a major-label recording budget for the first time in an eight-year career, the Seattle-based act opted to change little in the recording process. There's no big-name producer — Walla again mans the boards — and the band avoided extravagant trappings.

"The luxury of having a larger budget wasn't about spending $100,000 mixing with fancy Hit Factory mixers to get radio songs," Gibbard said. "But we knew if something wasn't right, we could afford to go back in the studio."

Since it built its career and fan base on its own, the group has found itself tirelessly having to justify its jump to a major label. "To set the record straight for the God knows millionth time, we certainly didn't sign to Atlantic just for the money," Gibbard said.

"There are opportunities available to bands on a major label that are incredibly difficult to attain for independent bands. ...We can hem and haw about how we're not on the radio, and we can hem and haw about how our overseas situation was a nightmare. We were on five different labels in Europe alone, not to mention a label in Japan and Australia. So we can hem and haw about how difficult it all is, or we can take the plunge."

A GLAAD report finds a slight increase in gay TV characters

SURVEY SAYS | Sixteen homosexual characters are depicted in network TV series scheduled for the 2005-'06 season, a small increase over last year but still inadequate, the Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation said.

Out of 710 characters appearing on a regular or recurring basis on the six major broadcast networks in the new season, about 2 percent are gay, lesbian or bisexual, according to the group's annual study.

Last season, GLAAD counted 11 homosexual characters on network shows.

While there is no definitive figure available for the U.S. gay and lesbian population, GLAAD believes the number is "certainly higher" than that represented on network TV, spokesman Damon Romine said.

"This is a shocking misrepresentation of reality and of the audience watching these programs," Romine added in the report of

Although GLAAD has conducted the study for 10 years, this was the first time the specific percentage of gay characters on TV was calculated.

Many gay and lesbian characters fall into minor or supporting roles in the TV season that begins the week of Sept. 19, GLAAD found. Homosexual characters also tend to lack ethnic and gender diversity.

"If you're looking at network television to see a good cross-section of our community, you're not going to find it," Romine said.

Cable TV is ahead of broadcast in "exploring our lives, families and careers" and features 25 lesbian and gay characters in the new season, the group said. LYNN ELBER (AP)

Painful Harvest

'Constant Gardener' follows a twisting trail of African intrigue

FILM | John le Carre's rich worlds of intrigue can be a tough sell on the big screen. Yet the assured directing of Fernando Meirelles and the fluid chemistry of Ralph Fiennes and Rachel Weisz combine to place "The Constant Gardener" among the better le Carre adaptations.

The film works only fitfully in its big-picture subject of heartless pharmaceutical executives and government officials putting dollars ahead of the lives of Kenyans used as guinea pigs for an experimental tuberculosis drug.

But the film succeeds on the personal front, presenting a bittersweet, tragic story of love and loss, faith shattered and restored.

The energy of Meirelles' direction gives "The Constant Gardener" irresistible momentum despite its twisting structure, dense plot and a rather clichéd gallery of villains.

That's no surprise, though, considering this is the filmmaker whose superb "City of God," a gritty tale of boys with guns in service of Brazil's drug trade, earned him an unexpected Academy Award nomination for best director.

HER CHEATING HEART: Rachel Weisz steps out on Ralph Feinnes while in Africa.

The story opens with the murder of Tessa Quavle (Weisz), whose body is found in a vehicle along a lonely stretch of Kenyan highway. A British crusader on behalf of health issues relating to Africa's masses, the outspoken Tessa has bedeviled two governments.

A local doctor (Hubert Kounde) who was Tessa's rabble-rousing ally and traveling companion is suspected in her murder, possibly a crime of passion.

Tessa's husband, Justin (Fiennes), properly grieves and stiff-upper-lips his way through the ordeal. A meekly pleasant midlevel functionary for the British High Commission in Kenya, Justin is expected by colleagues to fold up camp and head back to England to lick his cuckold's wounds.

Instead, driven by a perverse desire to know the extent of his wife's apparent infidelities, Justin sticks around and pokes his nose into Tessa's murder, the trail leading to revelations his wife had uncovered about the abominable human side effects of medical research in the name of profit.

Meirelles and his cinematographer crafts a dazzling pastiche of gorgeous African vistas and wildlife balanced by frenetic camera work that captures the squalor of human habitation.

FLEXING | Using the slogan "The only thing we take seriously is the music," country superstar Toby Keith and veteran record executive Scott Borchetta will kick off their new joint label ven-make his acting debut in a film set to start shooting in October.

The new venture will be structured as an umbrella company housing two labels, Keith's and Borchetta's. The latter will be known as Big Machine Records.

As someone who has had a notoriously stormy relationship with Universal Music Group Nashville, it is fair to wonder what Keith will be like as a label head.

"You can't be hypocritical about it," he said. "I've raged against the machine for a long time, so I'm not going to turn into the person I tried to get away from." PHYLLIS STARK (BILLBOARD)

'Let's cash in.' savs Hollywood as movie dialogue hits phones

QUOTE-UNQUOTE | "Please go away, let me sleep, for the love of God!"

It's not only a classic Chris Farley line from "Tommy Boy," but it's also the latest wave in cell phone ring

Mobile phone ringers increasingly are featuring memorable movie quotes. The clips aren't always limited to the spoken word: For "Star Wars" fans, options include Darth Vader's heavy breathing, R2-D2's computerized chirps and Chewbacca's phlegmy roar.

Although the new trend may make cell phone ringers more annoving than ever, they hold the promise of delivering new profits to the studios. Ring tones have become a $3 billion worldwide boon for record labels, and Hollywood and labor unions are trying to figure out if the movie ring tone market is anywhere near that large.

Customers pay as much as $3 per ring tone, and the ringers deliver free advertising to whatever is being sampled, be it a few bars from 50 Cent's "Just a Lil Bit" or Angelina Jolie inquiring, "Still alive, baby?" from "Mr. & Mrs. Smith."

Billboard magazine now carries a chart tracking the most popular ring tones; 20th Century Fox has set up free ring tone download sta-say, "Hey, hey, hey! It's Fat Albert. Answer your phone!" In August, Universal Pictures implemented a deal with leading aggregator Infospace for movie-themed ring tones and ring backs.

Hollywood's labor agreements, though, are not clear about how, or even if, the dialogue's authors will be compensated for this application.

"It's a very difficult product to license," said Mary Stuyvesant, general manager of entertainment marketing services for Infospace. Among several other lines of movie dialogue, Infospace has made cell phone deals for a number of clips from "Napoleon Dynamite," including "Tina, come get some ham."

Still, to an industry faced with declining movie admissions and slowing DVD sales, even a small new income stream would be welcome

Having dialogue ring tones, said Stuyvesant, is not unlike putting up a movie poster in your dorm room or wearing a band T-shirt. "It's a way to identify yourself and it signifies that you're in the know." JOHN HORN (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Television

LESS THINKING, MORE OGLING: All that being dark and quirky has gotten Fox's "Arrested Development" is some Emmys and the love of a bunch of eggheads. For the show's next season, expect eye candy in the form of Charlize Theron, who appears in a multi-episode arc.

'Buy Me' invites lookie-loos into the real-estate process

DEBUT | As anyone who has ever bought or sold a home can attest, trading in real estate is the very stuff of drama.

The new weekly series "Buy Me" (9 p.m., HGTV) takes a rather procedural view of buyers, sellers and brokers, and finds some interesting characters and situations.

Tonight's debut episode involves Paul, a 40-something bachelor who lives in a large house in a leafy suburb. His existing manse is hardly cramped. In fact, his collection of bachelor possessions — weights, stereo equipment, golf clubs, big TV sets, etc. — hardly makes a dent in the house's massive square footage. But he wants something bigger.

BACHELOR PAD: Paul needs an even bigger space for his many boy things.

This begins a series of frustrations for his beleaguered real estate agent, Amanda, who continually cajoles him to turn his adult dorm into something homier so she can present it to families and single buyers. But Paul won't be putting out the potpourri. He even skips out on several open houses, jetting off to Vegas and leaving Amanda in the lurch.

"Buy Me" does a good job of outlining a nail-biting process of buying and selling real estate, but does so from a frustrating narrative distance that ends up unsettling the viewer. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Video games can earn you big bucks in South Korea

Keyboard and mouse in hand, he battled until nearly his last breath.

The death of Lee, a 28-yearold man identified only by his last name who passed away earlier this month after nearly 50 straight hours of playing online computer games, has South Korea concerned about the health of the millions of gamers in the world's most wired country.

Many of South Korea's 17 million gamers regularly stroll into Internet cafes and camp out in front of monitors to play for hours — and even sometimes days or longer.

"I've seen people who play games for months, just briefly going home for a change of clothing, taking care of all their eating and sleeping here," said Jun Mung-gyu, 27, who runs an Internet cafe in Seoul.

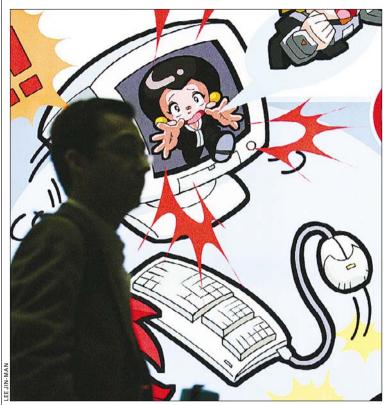

The number of counseling sessions for game addiction quadrupled last year from the previous year, a government agency said last week. There were 8,978 cases of counseling for game addition in 2004, compared with 2,243 cases in 2003, according to data released by the Korea Agency for Digital Opportunity and Promotion.

This year, there have already been 7,649 counseling sessions in the first seven months.

Gamers camped out at internet cafes typically live on instant cup noodles and cigarettes, barely sleeping and seldom washing. Lee wasn't the first to die of such causes in this game-crazed nation: In 2002, a man expired in Kwangju after 86 hours of marathon gaming, among others.

Lee collapsed Aug. 5 in the southern city of Daegu after having eaten minimally and not sleeping, and died a few hours after being transported to a hospital. Doctors presume Lee died of heart failure, although no autopsy was performed.

Playing for Keeps

Computer games can also be a path to big rewards. Three cable channels are devoted to broadcasting game matches and a total of $4.4 million is given out as prize money in competitions each year.

Even the government is embracing electronic sports, or "E-sports," funding construction of the world's first e-sports stadium to be completed by 2008.

Hong Jin-ho, a 24-year-old professional gamer, earns more than $130,000 a year living and training with his game team.

"I have never thought of it as an addiction," said Hong. He admitted, however, that the seven to eight hours of daily training — which sometimes drags on for nearly 24 hours before competitions — can be physically challenging. "My body doesn't welcome it, but I do it to win," Hong said.

Physicians working with professional e-sports teams recommend gamers rest 10 minutes with their eyes closed after every five matches, and never play in the same posture for more than two hours.

"Addiction comes when you simply sit at Internet cafes and play games with people you don't know," said Ha Sang-hewn, an officer at the Korea e-Sports Association.

"The energy you consume is immense. The degree of concentration and absorption is so great that you lose yourself," said Han Hye-won, 30, a lecturer at Hannam University and Catholic University who plays four hours a day.

Han, who said she also went through a phase when her mother had to pull the plug to get her to stop playing the battle simulation game Starcraft, is now a lecturer in "digital storytelling," or the craft of writing scenarios for computer games. VICTORIA KIM (AP)

It's Not Just for Seeing

Science

The future of light is so bright, you'll have to wear shades

Scientists have been taking a closer look at the lighting in our homes, offices and vehicles, and they're seeing potential for a way to improve health and a new means of electronic communication.

None of this will happen tomorrow. But if you want a glimpse of where the field might be heading, listen to some experts at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N.Y., an academic home for lighting research.

Start with engineer E. Fred Schubert, talking about a new era of "smart" light sources. "We are looking at lighting systems that provide more than lighting," he said.

He's talking about light-emitting diodes, or LEDs. Most people know them as being quite small, like the lights that form numbers on digital clocks or blink on answering machines. But recent technological advances have made them much more powerful, able to illuminate swimming pools and serve as traffic signals, for example.

LEDs offer energy savings when compared to standard lighting, but Schubert is more excited about some other properties. One is that LEDs can be made to blink so fast that a person doesn't notice, but a receiving device can. And that, Schubert says, opens the door to using lights for electronic communication as well as illumination.

Of course, fiberoptic cables already transmit lots of data with light signals. But Schubert is talking about things like brake lights that tell a closely following car to stop, even if the driver doesn't notice, or room lights that link your computer to the Internet, avoiding Wi-Fi signals that can be pirated.

Schubert said such uses depend on overcoming some basic technical barriers, like making LEDs more powerful and energy-efficient. "I think we're looking at maybe a timeframe of the next five to 20 years," he said.

Meanwhile, his Rensselaer colleague Mariana Figueiro believes that lighting in offices and schools could be improved to help people stay healthy and productive, by acting on their internal body clocks.

"Light isn't just for vision any more," says Figueiro, program director at Rensselaer's Lighting Research Center and head of a committee on light and human health for the Illuminating Engineering Society of North America.

The 24-hour internal body clock is best known for governing cycles of alertness and sleep, and for producing jet lag when people travel across time zones. Light cues, especially blue light, help keep the clock on its daily cycle. "We're pretty much blue-sky detectors" whose clocks count on bright days and dark nights, said Figueiro.

But that's not necessarily what modern life delivers. During the winter in the Northeast, for example, a person can commute roundtrip in the dark and sit all day in electric light that's fine for vision, but may be too dim to stimulate the body clock. That's called biological darkness.

"We don't have this sharp signal of a bright light during the day and a dark night," Figuerio said.

How that affects people has been hard to document in the general population, she said, but studies suggest such possibilities as seasonal depression, fatigue, sleep disturbances and maybe even cancer, especially breast cancer. Some studies suggest reduced productivity on the job.

To counter that, architects and lighting engineers might someday take body clocks into account when they design lighting schemes, she said. They may be encouraged to take steps like providing plenty of natural light through windows and skylights, and installing bright blue LEDs near computer screens to give a dose of clock-adjusting light, she said. Destination U's interior is all light and air, but its inventory is firmly grounded in unique materials, labels and designs for both men and women.

→ STYLE: Mall shoppers can funkify their wardrobes here, while those with a wild streak can tone things down.

Unusual materials are the big draw, such as shirts made with bamboo (fibers, not stalks) and bags made from buffalo. The men's side is fairly adventurous, while the women's lines tend to play it safe color-wise, upping the fun with innovative cuts or surprising details. In a stumble typical of new stores, inventory can be spotty, especially in larger women's sizes. It's my hunch that the store

CASE IN POINT: Chic laptop cases from Attache are sleeker than any typical messenger bag; matching accessories will arrive this fall.

DETAILS: A conservative-looking blazer by Artine ($258) reveals its true colors with an embroidered back.

STRAP HAPPY: This Ecoganik blazer ($148) is made with organic cotton; straps and buckles bring the fun.

FLAT-ERING: Flatlinks ($138) reversible cufflinks, right, are one of the store's most popular and versatile items. A Manouk necklace (above, $64) adds heft and color to any outfit.

to $250 range. Most of the pieces can be worn a number of ways, however, making them investments rather than regrettable splurges.

- → SERVICE: Manager Kellie Crawford is one of the most outstanding staffers I've run across - helpful and friendly without being pushy. However, when she's unavailable, other staff members seem unable (or unwilling) to pick up the slack, often staying parked near the cash register while customers wander.
- → MINUS POINTS: The dressing rooms are far too dark, meaning you have to use the mirror in the main store — not fun for those of us who prefer to do our self-loathing in private.
- → BUREAUCRACY: Store credit only with tags and receipt.
- → BOTTOM LINE: Destination U walks the line between trendy and terrifying, offering styles both safe and stylish for the hesitant hipster or confirmed alternadult. The few missteps are easily overcome.

Beauty

OK. We Get It. You Like Makeup

Even in the days leading up to the U.S. Open, Serena Williams makes time for her beauty routine. She's such a "beauty junkie" that she's signed on to be the next "guest creator" for FLIRT! cosmetics, "I've tried every product," she said. "I'm addicted to products. I said to my manag er, 'I should get a beauty deal, I'm going to go broke buying all these products." She decided to go with Flirt!, which is sold only at Kohl's, because it's a line that speaks to both her and her fans, she said. Williams, long known for her unconventional style, even wears makeup on the tennis court but not much since there aren't many waterproof cosmetic products on the market. "Maybe that's next for me," she joked. Among the products that will have Williams' stamp are lip glosses attached to necklaces. They'll be in stores in February. (AP).

When Nothing Seems to Help

My sister, now in her 40s, has been anorexic since her fiance broke off their engagement in her early 20s. She married another man years later, but the sickness remained. Our family has tried everything: being supportive, confronting her. encouraging her to seek counseling, ignoring it. Nothing makes a difference. Her anorexia is causing health problems, too, like early menopause. Sadly, I think we realize she'll always be like this since she won't get help. So what do we do now? Should we continue to try to inject reality into our conversations or just give up? - BETHESDA DILEMMA

I'm sure watching a loved one self-destruct for two decades has taken its toll on you and your family, and you must make sure that this battle isn't damaging your own health and well-being. But that need not entail giving up altogether. After all, if you were to let her illness steamroll you into submission, you'd probably feel even more helpless.

A gentle but firm statement such as "I'm not going to listen to you harm yourself with talk like that," repeated each and every time she comments negatively on her size, can help you avoid being an enabler. She should also continue to hear the message that you want her to seek help. One possible new angle is purely medical: Is her husband aware that anorexia is much more than a psychological issue? Osteoporosis, kidney problems and even heart failure can follow such a long history of the disorder. Might her doctor or gynecologist (if she even has them) intervene? Meanwhile, your basic duties are to keep showing love and concern, and to try to maintain a relationship based on who she really is and how she feels inside, rather than the numbers on the scale.

What's with the inability to tell readers the stark truth? In last week's column, is it at all possible that "isn't ready" was the 19-year-old son's code for "I'm not college material" or at least "I'm not this college's material?" Or doesn't stupidity rank up there on the sexy scale with homesickness, substance abuse and sexual identity concerns? -ANONYMOUS

Well, first off, he left school voluntarily. No one suggested he was given the "4 F's and 2 incompletes" armed escort off campus. Plus, college admissions boards are notoriously adept at choosing students who have the academic goods to succeed in their programs. I only wanted the parents to find out more about the situation. Increased communication, rather than arbitrary "You stupid!" condemnation, is always more conducive to a parent-child (or any) relationship.

Peanut Butterstick

PVE BEEN WATCHING the "Butterstick" controversy with interest. As a Chinese speaker, I've been attracted to one of the names on the Zoo's voting list: "Hua Sheng." Not only does this name mean "China-Washington" and "magnificent," but it also sounds like the Chinese homonym for "Peanut." Perhaps we should start calling the little guy Peanut, which would make both Americans and Chinese smile.

KANYEWEST has filed a lawsuit accusing a Chicago DJ of possessing 10 unreleased songs that West produced before he was 18. The lawsuit filed Monday in Chicago alleges that Eric "E-Smoove" Miller improperly tried to distribute some of those

ART GARFUNKEL, who pleaded guilty last year to pot possession in upstate New York, was charged again Sunday after a marijuana cigarette was allegedly found in the ashtray of his car, police said. CFC Organizations:

If your ad were here, it could be seen today by tens of thousands of federal employees.

If your agency benefits from Combined Federal Campaign donor designations, make your appeal in Express. Thirty-six percent of federal workers in the area ride Metro, the primary distribution point of Express. That means your lifeblood is riding, reading, and quite possibly waiting to see your message right here before they make their CFC pledge.
